

February 7 Communiqué

Hi Sunnyside Church Family,

In my relatively short life, I have already lived through several seasons when uncertainty felt palpable—when communal anxiety could almost be felt in the body. In moments like these, I notice how deeply we long to be with people who feel safe and kind, people who welcome us with warmth and do not question our belonging or judge our confusion.

In many of those seasons of transition, that place of safety happened to be a church—sometimes a small church within the church—where a unity of spirit could be sensed and shared. Many of us know the quiet joy of experiencing this kind of communal resonance and support: a community that shares not only common beliefs, but a deep commitment to the way of Jesus.

There is something profoundly grounding about praying and walking alongside one another when the world feels unsettled. I see this grounding among us in simple and sacred ways—like gathering this Sabbath around shared tables at our monthly church-wide potluck. Through fellowship, food, and conversation we practice the ministry of presence. The spirit revealed in these moments—self-giving love, gracious attitudes, and everyday kindness—is difficult to overestimate. It is a gentle yet powerful witness to Christ at work among us.

That same spirit calls us to be present for one another in times of grief and loss. This Sabbath, February 7, at 4:00 pm our church family will gather to remember and celebrate the life of Shirley Judd—honoring the gift of her life and holding one another with care and prayer.

And it also invites us to celebrate love and companionship in seasons of joy. On February 15, our Senior Ministries will host a Valentine's Dinner—an opportunity to share laughter, stories, and connection. Registration is available through the Church Office at (503) 252-8080. As we continue nurturing faith across generations, our Children's Choir will resume practice on February 21, meeting after the church service and before the Adventurers Club gathering.

As we prepare for International Sabbath, I am grateful for the ways we are growing in our understanding and appreciation of the beautiful diversity of God's family—a reminder that the body of Christ is enriched by many voices, cultures, and stories.

And as Pastors Seth and Kevin continue to guide us through their messages during divine services, my prayer is that the Spirit will lead us into honest reflection and faithful experimentation as we gently recalibrate our understanding of church—not as a place we attend, but as a life we share. Because we truly need each other—today and always.

With gratitude,

Pastor Violeta Bilan

Happy Sabbath PAA Family,

Community Vespers: How to Say Goodbye

Last Friday night, our campus slowed down in a rare and meaningful way. As Sabbath was beginning, students gathered for vespers, some tired, some laughing, all bringing their own stories into the room. Pastor Lydia from Crosswalk PDX spoke about How to Say Goodbye, not the hurried or awkward kind, but the kind that honors what has been. She talked about endings that don't erase meaning, about gratitude that can exist alongside sadness, and about letting go without pretending it doesn't hurt. Her words landed softly but stayed heavy, the kind you keep turning over in your mind. What made the night memorable wasn't only the message, but how students received it. The room grew quiet as they listened, recognizing pieces of their own lives in what was being said. There was an unspoken understanding that goodbyes are unavoidable, and that facing them well requires honesty and care. Some students leaned in, others sat thoughtfully, but everyone stayed present. As the service came to a close, the atmosphere didn't immediately lift. Instead, students lingered, talking in small groups, sharing hugs, and letting the moment stretch a little longer. The night held space for reflection, connection, and mutual support. When students eventually left, they carried more than just the memory of a Friday night gathering. The message followed them into their weekend, offering a reminder that endings can be meaningful, and that walking through them together makes them a little easier to bear.

History Goes Live at PAA

Step into a World History classroom at PAA and you might think you've wandered into a newsroom instead. Students are grouped into teams and handed a moment from history, one that once shaped the world and still echoes today. Their first task is to dig deep, researching the people, places, and consequences behind the story. Once the facts are clear, creativity takes over. Students transform their research into a polished news script, carefully written to inform, engage, and tell the story with accuracy and clarity. After earning approval from their teacher, it's time to go live. Chromebooks become cameras and teleprompters. A green screen turns the classroom into a studio. Two students step into the role of co-anchors, guiding the broadcast, while four others report from "the field," bringing different perspectives and details to the story. Each student has a part to play, and the success of the broadcast depends on everyone showing up prepared. As filming begins, confidence grows. Students adjust their delivery, support one another, and problem-solve in real time. History becomes something they inhabit, not just memorize. By the end of the project, students haven't just learned about the past, they've practiced collaboration, communication, and critical thinking. The classroom becomes a newsroom, the lesson becomes an experience, and students walk away having brought history to life in their own voices.

The Prayer Locker: A Place to Leave What You're Carrying

It started as just a locker on campus with a simple invitation. Our Campus Ministries team wanted to make space. Not for noise or answers, but for honesty. The prayer locker has become a place where students can pause for a moment and write down what they are carrying. Some slips of paper hold heavy worries, family situations, anxiety, big decisions. Others are short and simple, scribbled quickly between classes. Names aren't required. Explanations aren't either. Just the freedom to be real. Every other Friday during lunch, the prayer team gathers. They open the locker carefully, as if what's inside is fragile, because it is. They read each request, not to fix anything, but to lift each one up. In the middle of a busy week, they choose to slow down, to sit together, and to pray for classmates who may never know exactly who prayed for them, only that someone did. What's grown out of the prayer locker isn't just a routine, it's trust. Students are learning that they don't have to carry everything alone. That there is a place on campus where their worries are held with care. That even in the rush of schedules and responsibilities, there is time set aside to notice, to listen, and to intercede. The locker doesn't solve problems. It doesn't make life easier overnight. But every Friday, during lunch, space is made. And in that space, students are reminded that they are seen, valued, and prayed for, sometimes in silence, sometimes in hope, always with intention.

Have a wonderful weekend!

Mechelle Peinado, principal
